

Total war demands the cooperation and ruthless devotion of all the people of that country. ~~The~~ The enormous danger can only be faced with great national pride and efficiency. No person is exempt from such devotion and sacrifice, as all must be willing to protect the country in order to reach the end of total war.

When a country enters a state of total war, all resources - natural and humanitarian - are mobilized and maximised at all costs to further the war effort. A zero tolerance approach towards public opinion and standards of living is taken to ensure victory even in unfavorable conditions.

George Bates

Total War - Total War is when a country uses ~~its~~ all its resources to mobilise and be ready to ~~engage~~ engage in war. To do this all the people of that country must do their part as every amount of work is ^anecessary ~~to~~ contribution to the war effort. People would suffer however the nation is placed above the ~~the~~ people. ~~the~~ Those who do not contribute would be punished to create motivation to work as the people are the greatest resource. Most men would be at the war front and the women ~~it~~ + and children doing labor work. Anything that was deemed as useless ^{would be} ~~was~~ closed ~~to~~ to save resources such as heat and electricity ~~to~~ so they can be focused to the war effort. Total war is necessary when a country is about to lose everything and therefore war is ~~is~~ necessary to stimulate growth, but if the war is lost the results would be devastating.

"Total war" is defined by the total mobilisation of a population toward the ~~completion~~ completion and victory of a war. The entire population under government is to suffer like the soldiers on the ground. Unemployed are forced into jobs, women are to take up jobs in industry to release male workers to join the military. Luxuries such as sugar or clothing are to be reserved for the troops. Rich citizens will have to close down unnecessary shops such as designer clothing and jewelers to free up electricity and manpower that could go to weapons industry. Everyone would live a "Spartan" like style in "Total War" with the leader setting an example for this. Everything is meant to maintain the war effort. The cost of peoples social lives towards the war becomes necessary and will be restored only after the war. In "Total War" the population is supposed to make the conflict end as quickly as possible. While the civilian population is mobilised so is the entire force of the military. The military is to always be on the offensive, to never let up, until the enemy is destroyed. Anyone from the civilian or military populace who does not conform to the laws of government in "Total War" were dealt with particular harshness.

Total War:

The system of total war works by the demands from the government and the nation supporting their demands. Total war is a process to lead Germany into victory, therefore the government highly demands in resources and agricultural productions. It is also a matter of time, which Germans thought to be, the faster the production the closer to victory. People were given duties to accomplish its aim although in this sense individualism was to be sacrificed by each person.

Total War means to sacrifice the materialistic interests and comforts of individuals, in order to solely focus on gaining victory. There is much risk, therefore everyone must share the danger and burdens of the war equally. Social class does not matter. The key for success is fast action; it does not matter whether the methods the National Socialist government decides to take are morally right or wrong.

In total war, the German's were trying to improve her war economy at any cost. By this the government forces jobs on the unemployed, and women and men that benefited the war front in some way or form. Living standards were dramatically dropped, shops were closed, and anyone who was affected by this movement were forced into a war related job, and anyone who disagreed met harsh measures and punishments. Due to the ~~own~~ disappearance of class, gender and wealth, all the citizens of Germany were forced into the same level of labour, where the main aim of this method was to act fast, win the war by any means, and to regain ~~power~~ or obtain power for the mother land.

Definition of Total War

- Total War is basically a ~~the~~ conflict which countries mobilize all of their civilians and military resources in order to ~~obtain~~ ^{achieve} a complete victory. The speech stresses the significance of crushing the adversary's forces in battles and described wars as tending constantly to escalate in violence toward a theoretical absolute. It ~~also is distinguished~~ It is different from other wars, because it is distinguished from the partial commitment of lives and resources in limited war.
